

HYPNOTISM IN SURGERY.

Cuban Lieutenant's Frightful Wound Dressed Without Pain While He Is Hypnotized.

A serious and painful surgical operation, performed in the open air, under a roasting sun, with only the simplest instruments, and without either ether or chloroform, the patient relieved of all sensation of pain by hypnotic suggestion, is a strange exhibition to witness.

I was at Najaza when such an operation was performed on a sub-lieutenant, who understood English perfectly, and who was brought in with a macabre wound to the advance guard. The officer had received a terrible slash that cleft the right thigh and continued down, exposing the bones of the knee joint and laid open the calf below. Clotted blood filled the wound, stifling the flow of blood; but every fresh writhing or ly had not been opened. The patient lay with his eyes closed, as if in a faint, but without suggestion of pain, or even discomfort. The spectators were overcome with surprise, for he had groaned more than is usual with our wounded. They had never seen anything of this sort before. Some of the ignorant negroes took the surgeon for a wizard, and whispered something of Voodoo magic.

In a few minutes forty stitches had been made, and small skeins of silk were left at intervals in the gash, to answer the purpose of drainage pipes. Powdered iodoform was scattered in and over the wound, and the patient's body was well washed with the aseptic mercurial solution.

The operation was now over. The surgeon passed his hand over the man's brow and shook him slightly by the shoulder.

"You are now all right," he said. "You are perfectly well."

The man opened his eyes slowly, glanced about him, and tried to rise from his hammock, but fell back with a look of mild surprise.

He was weak, but he said that he had felt no pain; that the coin had grown bigger and bigger, until it formed itself into a golden pulce in a great, cool, blue ocean that washed above and below it, and then he had fallen asleep.

This, to my knowledge, is the only time that hypnotism has been attempted in an insurgent camp. The operation was a distinct success. The wound healed by first intention, and Dr. Danforth, physician to

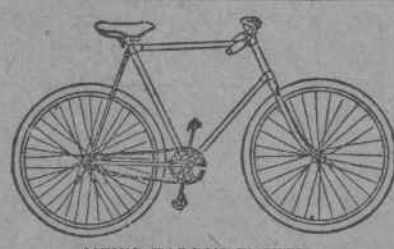

A CLOCK TO RUN 40 YEARS.

It Will Not Have to Be Wound Again by Anybody Until 1936.

There are clocks that go eight days, some that go a month, and others that go not at all, but there is only one clock that will keep good time forty years without winding, and that has just been built in Chicago.

Purdy Campbell, a Chicago jeweller, made up his mind that he had forty years of his life before him. He figured on this basis that he would, during the rest of his life, spend about sixty days of his valuable time winding the clock, to say nothing of time and temper lost through forgetting it. Then he decided to make a clock that would have to be wound but once in forty years.

He spent his odd minutes at the task, and has succeeded in producing a wonder-
